Q: Docker container is randomly stopped and started We are running docker on Kubernetes and we have some error in the logs. I saw that sometimes the container is randomly stopped and started. It is not stopped because the logs are being written to a file. And it is not restarted because the logs are not rolled over and it is not restarted because the pods are not being restarted. I can't see anything in the logs to identify which container is causing the problem. Are there any logs which can help me to identify the exact container which causes this problem? A: The logs should be generated even if the pod is not restarted. If the pod is not restarted the logs will not be flushed into a file. In your logs you can find Mar 25 09:10:35 kube-engine-wkunf6-app-2 app[6856]: 2017-03-25 09:10:35.553554 I [34]: /bin/sh -c /bin/echo 10 > /proc/sys/kernel/hung_task_timeout_secs It seems to be hung for sometime. Exercise, high blood pressure, obesity and cancer: the link between physical activity, diet, and cancer. Exercise can be an effective treatment for several chronic conditions including hypertension, obesity, and type 2 diabetes. It can also have a role in prevention, and early detection, of cancer. Data from several recent prospective and case-control studies indicate that physically active people have a lower risk of cancer than inactive people. These beneficial effects of physical activity may partly be explained by favorable changes in lifestyle factors such as smoking and dietary intake. However, the associations between physical activity and cancer are complex and biologic mechanisms remain to be elucidated 82157476af
